It is not legitimate (Nicole Prause's answer to What do you think about your brain on porn movement?). Porn-induced erectile dysfunction is reported by men who have been told that is what happened to them by websites promoting their life coaches. Three studies have examined these men in the lab and find no evidence that sex film viewing is associated with erectile functioning. If anything, those who view more sex films tend to feel more aroused even to pretty tame content

Over the last few years, Dr. Prause appears to have taken great pains to position herself as a “woman being subjected to misogynistic oppression when she tells truth to power.” She frequently tweets or posts the following infographic that she apparently also shares at her public lectures, suggesting she is being victimized “as a woman scientist,” and painting herself as a trailblazer forging ahead to prove porn’s harmlessness despite prejudiced attacks. It falsely accuses Wilson, Marnia Robinson, Don Hilton MD, and nofap founder Alexander Rhodes of misogyny. It’s pure bullshit.

Why do the recognized scientists prefer to stay silent about the so called pseudoscientists?

This question previously had details. They are now in a comment.

Nicole Prause, worked at University of California, Los Angeles

Updated Aug 27, 2017

For myself, I generally ignore pseudoscience unless I am specifically asked to comment on it (e.g., media, for legal case, etc. like Investigation: Clinic making questionable claims) or if it appears to have significant negative consequences on people and I am uniquely qualified to debunk it (Your Porn Addiction Isn't Real). In the latter, we actually have some reported suicides in the news of people diagnosed with depression who were, instead, sent for treatment of “porn addiction”. “Risk of death” is an excellent reason for scientists to confront pseudoscience.

To second Kathleen, we also are focused on actually generating the science itself, our actual job.

Lastly, if you speak out, you will be attacked as described in this article about my experiences with cyberstalking, fake complaints to boards and employers, and outrageous claims of funding and job history to try to discredit you:

Does Masturbating Make You a Sex Addict? What About Porn? What About Bondage? Even the Experts Can't Agree.

It can be annoying, insulting, threatening, and downright frightening to stand for science.

The second Prause infographic purports to be a primer on “how to evaluate sex films” (Prause euphemism for pornography). A closer look reveals that Prause is guilty of breaking most of her rules for evaluating sources of information. At the bottom of the infographic she lists 15 websites she wants the reader to believe are sources of “bad information” (sites run by the many individuals and organizations she regularly defames or harasses, as documented on these pages, including Gary Wilson).

How can I believe in the answers given on Quora? What is its authenticity?

Nicole Prause, worked at University of California, Los Angeles
Updated Feb 26, 2018

Originally Answered: How can I believe the answers on Quora are true?

Put on your skeptics hat with me! My field has many necromancers who pose as fake experts, so we spend quite a lot of time having to debunk the fake information they post on Quora (and everywhere else). The infographic (below) identifies some basic ways to evaluate what is posted in Quora.

To expand:

1. Check how the poster makes a living. Is this a possible conflict of interest with what they are posting? For example, I answer many question about pornography, but I receive no funding from the pornography industry. It is just my area of expertise.
2. Do they claim “always” or “never”? Black-or-white thinking is rarely an accurate way to describe any behavior, so it should raise red flags.
3. Does the poster have any credentials? This is not to say that someone without a PhD cannot be bright, but systematic, supervised education is important mostly because a well-educated person is most likely to know what they do not know. Our professors challenge us, we are asked tough questions with every article submission and conference talk; our logic is constantly refined by these challenges. Knowing what you do not know, arguably, is more important than what is known.
4. Conspiracy theories are ideas that may be held by many people that claim to know the “real story” and typically are fantastic. While conspiracies are possible, consider whether what is being described could realistically actually be coordinated, kept quiet, funded, etc. Usually, the answer is no way.
5. Any poster expressing racism, sexism, or similar disdain for an entire group of people based solely on an immutable attribute is showing their inability to adhere to logic.
6. Anecdotes are not data. The public often likes to argue with science using phrases like “but all my friends” or “but I saw it on Reddit”. Thousands of people can believe pretty goofy things. Also, scientists study central tendencies. Outliers almost always exist in our data, and these anecdotes may exactly reflect such outliers when the poster has not systematically studied them.

TOOLS TO EVALUATE
INFORMATION ABOUT SEX FILMS

MONEY
Who benefits from sex films being labeled as “educational”? For example, therapists who are “Certified Sex Addiction Therapists” must call on and use their training “order” to continue to make money from treatments.

BLACK OR WHITE THINKING
Alcoholism and generally excessive drinking claims that the effects of sex films are always negative without any positives.

MASTURBATION
Sex films are used almost exclusively for sexual pleasure and arousal. They reflect what the viewer is interested without leading or encouraging that an effect also exist and due to masturbation or a partner refusing sex.

FAKE CREDENTIALS
Many authors use terms like “neuropsychologist”, “psychologist”, “researcher”, just make up fake credentials, or their “credentials” often have a degree, but they claim to have knowledge in areas (e.g., neuroscience) in which they have no training. Consider who the author is, if you can verify their expertise in science, neuroscience, and their general reputation.

CONSPIRACY THEORIES
Some individuals claim to have secret knowledge that actual experts do not possess or claim the “real” information is being suppressed. These theories usually only rely on other with no independent means to support them.

SEXISM, RACISM
Are there personal attacks included in the content? Authors that attack others using biased language are writing based on emotions, not reason.

ANECDOTES
Personal stories are not tested like science. For example, people may report seeing information due to getting bad sex education or a story in the media.

My friend is addicted to porn. How can I help him?

Nicole Prause, PhD Neuroscience/statistician studies human sexual behaviors
 Answered Dec 15, 2016

Neuroscientists agree that sex films are not addictive, but the confusion is understandable.
 Op-ed: Anti-porn school program misrepresents science ¹⁷
 Is sex addiction real? Depends on whom you ask ¹⁷

Thousands of therapists have paid incredible amounts of money to be trained to treat this fake diagnosis, even though no randomly controlled treatment trial exists (1). Some of them are the very people who hope to profit by answering you here. I do not profit in any way from treating this, but am a neuroscientist who has been tirelessly attacked by profiteers.

We have created a guide to help you find information on how you might help a friend who is viewing more sex films than he would like (below). If desired, there are many sex educators and therapists with whom he could discuss his feelings without the shame the sex addiction treatment providers would heap on him.

AAASECT Position on Sex Addiction ¹⁷

TOOLS TO EVALUATE

INFORMATION ABOUT SEX FILMS

MONEY

Who benefits from sex films being labeled as addictive? For example, therapists who are "Certified Sex Addiction Therapist" must call sex and sex films addictive in order to continue to make money from treatments.

BLACK OR WHITE THINKING

Absolutes are generally worrisome, including claims that the effects of sex films are always negative without any positives.

MASTURBATION

Sex films are used almost exclusively for sexual pleasure and orgasm. The effects of sex films can't be determined without testing or acknowledging that any effects also could also be due to masturbation or a partner refusing sex.

FAKE CREDENTIALS

Many authors use terms like "neuroscience enthusiast", "coach", "speaker", just make up fake credentials, or hide their identity. Others have a degree, but they claim to have knowledge in areas (e.g., neuroscience) in which they have no training. Consider who the author is, if you can verify their expertise at known universities, and that person represents.

CONSPIRACY THEORIES

Some websites claim to have secret knowledge that actual experts do not possess or claim the "real" information is being suppressed. These sources usually only cite each other with no mainstream news to support them.

SEXISM, RACISM

Are there personal attacks included in the criticism? Authors that attack others using biased language are writing based on emotions, not reason.

ANECDOTES

Personal stories are not tested like science. For example, people may report wrong information due to getting bad sex education or a desire to be famous.

How overcome porn addiction?

Nicole Prause, worked at University of California, Los Angeles
Answered Dec 15, 2016

Originally Answered: How do you treat porn addiction?

Unfortunately, there are no randomly controlled trials of treatments for people who report struggling to regulate their own sex film viewing. This is made more complicated by the thousands of therapists who make up their own treatments without research support to profit from people like you who are worried about their experiences with sex films. However, there are a large group of therapists and educators who are a good source of information (and therapy, if desired) who just wrote about this issue. I am not a member, but am a neuroscientist who has been attacked by this massive for-profit industry for many years. AAECT Position on Sex Addiction ¹⁷

Neuroscientists agree there is not sufficient evidence to call sex film viewing addictive: Op-ed: Anti-porn school program misrepresents science ¹⁸

Is sex addiction real? Depends on whom you ask: ¹⁹

This may help you evaluating information about sex films, as there are many fake news websites trying to profit from these type of worries.

TOOLS TO EVALUATE

INFORMATION ABOUT SEX FILMS

MONEY

Who benefits from sex films being labeled as addictive? For example, therapists who are "Certified Sex Addiction Therapist" must call sex and sex films addictive in order to continue to make money from treatments.

BLACK OR WHITE THINKING

Absolutes are generally worrisome, including claims that the effects of sex films are always negative without any positives.

MASTURBATION

Sex films are used almost exclusively for sexual pleasure and orgasm. The effects of sex films can't be determined without testing or acknowledging that any effects also could also be due to masturbation or a partner refusing sex.

FAKE CREDENTIALS

Many authors use terms like "neuroscience enthusiast", "coach", "speaker", just make up fake credentials, or hide their identity. Others have a degree, but they claim to have knowledge in areas (e.g., neuroscience) in which they have no training. Consider who the author is, if you can verify their expertise at known universities, and that person represents.

CONSPIRACY THEORIES

Some websites claim to have secret knowledge that actual experts do not possess or claim the "real" information is being suppressed. These sources usually only cite each other with no mainstream news to support them.

SEXISM, RACISM

Are there personal attacks included in the criticism? Authors that attack others using biased language are writing based on emotions, not reason.

ANECDOTES

Personal stories are not tested like science. For example, people may report wrong information due to getting bad sex education or a desire to be famous.

Unfortunately, we do. I research a controversial area and have a stalker. My name appears on his website over 1500 times. He has stolen and posted personal photos of me multiple times. He threatened my lab at one point so directly we had to alert the police, our staff, and close and hide the lab. He wrote my employer over a dozen times claiming I faked data, titles, and that I was involved in a conspiracy to promote porn, amongst other claims. When I got on Twitter, he started on Twitter. When I got on quora, he joined Quora.

Gary Wilson has cease and desist and multiple do not contact orders from myself and my attorney, but he has never stopped. It is terrifying. I have fortified my personal home and have protection at my public talks out of fear. Two weeks ago, another anti-porn zealot posted on Twitter mocking my fear about Wilsons stalking. Because Wilson is unemployed and recently filed for bankruptcy, there is no other legal recourse to stop him. I believe he is likely severely mentally ill.

Yes, having our names exposed can and does subject us to incredible risks.

Prause obsessively attacks MDPI, which is the Swiss parent company of numerous academic journals, including Behavioral Sciences. MDPI does not publish predatory journals. In fact, it was investigated years ago after it was mistakenly placed on a predatory list, and formally determined to be a legitimate publisher. See: <http://www.mdpi.com/about/announcements/534>. The man (Jeffrey Beall) who made the error eventually deleted his entire operation.

Prause is obsessed with MDPI because (1) Behavioral Sciences published two articles that Prause disagrees with (because they discussed papers by her, among hundreds of papers by other authors), and (2) Gary Wilson is a co-author of Park et al., 2016. Prause has a long history of cyberstalking and defaming Wilson, chronicled in this very extensive page. The two papers:

- Neuroscience of Internet Pornography Addiction: A Review and Update (Love et al., 2015)
- Is Internet Pornography Causing Sexual Dysfunctions? A Review with Clinical Reports (Park et al., 2016)

For much more see - Prause's efforts to have Behavioral Sciences review paper \(Park et al., 2016\) retracted.

Which journals for publishing psychology research papers are considered good (other than PLOS ONE)? Why or why not?

Nicole Prause, worked at University of California, Los Angeles
Answered Feb 27, 2017

Many indices have been developed to try to distinguish good journals from bad. The first task is to distinguish predatory journals from real journals. The second task is to distinguish quality within real journals.

Predatory journals are a major blight on science. Predatory journals make it nearly impossible for the public to tell whether something "published" is actually of quality. Jeffrey Beall used to maintain a well-known list of predatory journals, but this list was closed just a few weeks ago for reasons that he still has not published. Predatory journals may have several features, including

- Inadequate or no peer-review
- Disregard reviews that recommend rejection
- Board members listed who do not know they are listed
- Extremely fast reviews promised
- Not indexed
- No recognized impact factor
- Authors are required to pay a fee to publish
- Rarely cited by others

Once you have established that the journal is not merely predatory, the strength can be determined by several factors. The "Impact Factor" is the most widely used method to tell journal quality. There is debate regarding how good of an indicator it is, but it is rare that a predatory journal would have an impact factor. Also, fields vary in their range. Neuroscience has some very high impact factor journals, while social work's most prestigious journals tend to have lower impact factors. It is useful to know your field in determining what a good metric is for your content.

A few examples. Behavioral Sciences was on Beall's predatory journal list, has no impact factor, was known for ignoring reject reviews, editors sometimes did not know they were functioning as an editor, and it required authors to pay to publish. PLOS, which you noted,

This is easy. Find a single example where Wilson ever cites a positive of porn. Not that it is great. Or that you should definitely watch it. Just see. He never. Acknowledges. A. Single. One.

That is all you have to know about his fraud.
