

NICOLE PRAUSE, Ph.D.

Naked Neuroscience

When Nicole Prause stepped into the Kinsey Institute laboratory at Indiana University in 1998 as a student Research Assistant, she had no way to know this would become a career that put her at the center of cutting edge neuroscience and social justice issues in sexual health.

Dr. Prause is a licensed psychologist, neuroscientist, and statistician who speaks internationally translating the science of sex to the public.

With her mobile laboratory, she is bringing demonstrations of sex laboratories, physiology, and neuroscience to documentary film sets, newsrooms, and web series.

Nicole has been featured on:

PBS Nova, National Public Radio (NPR), LA Times, San Francisco Chronicle, The Guardian (UK), and Men's Health among many others.

Science is in high demand to make sense of our ever-changing world, and Dr. Prause brings simple language to explain complex topics that people want to know about.

When Nicole speaks, she brings data, balance, and the heart of a clinician to her audiences. She puts 200% into everything she does – whether that's running a marathon, racing motorbikes, or giving a talk. She's the real deal.

Watch out Neil deGrasse Tyson, there's a female neuroscientist in town!
